MILITIA OFFICERS

With rhoumatism, which is likely to assume a chronic form unless carefully treated. The following prescription oby joining in the maneouvres," he said. I think, however, that line officers should make every effort to go. They will learn much that will be of vast beinefit to them in the discharge of their military dutles.

Would Help Enlisted Men.

I only regret," continued Colonel Stern, "that the invitation does not extend to the men as well as the officers. Of course, a great many of the militiamen would be unable to go, but it would be a splendid blan to make one company from, say, three. If only 100 men went, their experience would be such that upon their return the State troops would be equipped with that many efficient instructors. This would tend greatly towards the good of the service.

"Line officers, members of the medical corps and quartermasters should certainly take advantage of the opportunity to increase their knowledge of military affairs," he concluded whether he would a greatly towards the good of the service.

"Line officers members of the medical corps and quartermasters should certainly take advantage of the opportunity to increase their knowledge of the Richmond Light Infantry Blues Battalion, was too much surprised to give any definite answer when asked whether he would be glad to do so. The nows is such a surprise to me that I am at a loss to know what to say."

Major T. M. Wortham, commander of the First Battalion, Field Artillery, was anxious to learn further details before expressing his intentions.

Would Probably Go.

"Fine" declared Major L T' Price.
commanding the First Battallon, First Virginia Infantry, when acquainted with the invitation of the department.
"I probably shall go," he said. "This is a pleasant shock to me, though I can likely arrange to get away."

Captain W. M. Myers, commanding
Battery A. Richmond Howitzers, thought he would be "among those present." "I will be alad of the opportunity for the experience," he said,
"and will try to arrange to get off."

Further details are being anxiously awaited by the officers. The information from Washington does not state whether or got they are to be furnished transportation and pay.
